Wise advice from the Buddha

“Do not believe in a thing said merely because it is said; nor in traditions because they have been handed down from antiquity; nor in rumours, as such; nor in writings by sages, merely because sages wrote them... nor on the mere authority of your own teachers or masters. But we are to believe when the writing, doctrine, or saying is corroborated by our own reason and consciousness. For this I have taught you: not to believe merely because you have heard, but when you believed of your own consciousness, then to act accordingly and abundantly.”

Freedom of Thought – Official statement

As the Theosophical Society has spread far and wide over the world, and as members of all religions have become members of it without surrendering the special dogmas, teachings and beliefs of their respective faiths, it is thought desirable to emphasise the fact that there is no doctrine, no opinion, by whomsoever taught or held, that is in any way binding on any member of the Society, none which any member is not free to accept or reject. Approval of its Three Objects is the sole condition of membership.

No teacher, no writer, from H.P. Blavatsky downwards, has any authority to impose his or her teachings or opinions on members. Every member has an equal right to be attached to any school of thought which they may choose, but have no right to force that choice on any other.

Neither a candidate for any office nor any voter can be rendered ineligible to stand or to vote, because of any opinion held or because of membership in any school of thought to which they may belong. Opinions or beliefs neither bestow privileges nor inflict penalties.

The Members of the General Council earnestly request every member of the Theosophical Society to maintain, defend and act upon these fundamental principles of the Society, and also fearlessly exercise their own right of liberty of thought and of expression thereof, within the limits of courtesy and consideration of others.

President's Report

How time flies. Probably by the time you read this Easter will have passed and we will be well into crisp autumn weather and hopefully a little rain. While the East Coast of Australia often gets drenched, we seem to miss out on all of the showers. We have had brilliant sunshine though, throughout all of summer, the light in Perth must be better here than anywhere else!

Our Tuesday Night Program has been well attended and it is always good to welcome new members and visitors. If you do know of someone who may be interested in a particular subject that will be presented, do ask them if they would like to come! We have a great program coming up, Perry Coles will continue with; "An introduction to Esoteric principles", there will be a DVD by John Algeo; "Harry Potter and the Mystic Quest" and John Davey will do a presentation on; "Preparing to die- doing it now!" We have also re-programmed; "Islam, Muslims and Misconceptions", by Kashif Saleem. As well as that there will also be; "Karmic Visions revived," by Viv Ward and "Music; the language of the Soul," presented by Jasmine Farghaly. Surely Jasmine will be our youngest presenter yet! As you can see, a wonderful program, you cannot miss any of it...

Mt. Helena has kept us busy. There has been a termite problem in Harris House, which turned out to be quite serious. We are busy with the eradication now. Some of the roof structure was compromised, so a renovation has been necessary. Luckily none of the other buildings in Mt Helena have been affected; our accommodation is safe. Much pruning and clearing of branches and leaves on the property has already taken place. It seems there is always more to be done, so we are having a busy bee or clean up to attend to the smaller jobs on the 3rd and 4th of May. This will be a great occasion to get together and to breathe in the fresh Mt. Helena air. Transport can be organized, so see Shelley for further details.

Our library has quite a few new books. Have you checked our stock lately? There will be something that suits you, for sure. We are always looking for individual and passionate presenters, therefore who knows, with a little reading and study you can soon be an expert. Your individual view is valuable, remember that, always. To finish, the famous words of Henry Ford; "Coming together is a beginning. Keeping together is progress. Working together is success." Warm wishes from Tina.

News from the Library

There has been a good deal of activity in the library since the start of this year. First of all with the completion of the library stock take last year we have now installed a computer database search facility, which replaces the old manual card filing system, so that library users may search for a book by title or author to see if it is in the library and where it might be located. There are very short and easy to use instructions next to the monitor, and library staff can assist you in any search, if you need any help.

Recently we have added over 80 new books to the library, some of which have been newly purchased, and others that were donated. There have been two new book orders which have arrived, within the last six weeks, from the U.S.A. and India which have been added to our bookshop shelves. Come in and see some of the new titles and also some old favourites that are back in stock.

We are currently placing our entire T. S. convention lecture CDs, from 2003 onwards, onto our database. We have put them all in the reading room for people to be able to check them out, as you would a book, and take them home so that they may listen to many very interesting lectures delivered over the years. Have a look and browse through the collection - You will be surprised at the variety of speakers and topics on offer. While you are in the reading room we have also placed on display, in a glass cabinet, various first edition books that are on permanent loan from my own personal private collection. If you have an interest in some early T. S. publishing history then take a few minutes to have a look at the first edition, first printing of "Isis Unveiled" (there are unverified claims that there are less than 10 copies of this Sept. 1877 printing known to be still in existence). There's also a second edition copy of a Nov. 1877 printing of this same book, personally signed by H. P. Blavatsky, to a prominent spiritualist and author himself, who also has a very brief mention in Vol. 1 of HPB'S Collected Writings. Read the inscription and the story, on display, about this person. There are copies of "People from the Other World" (by Henry Steel Olcott from 1875 - the oldest in the collection), "The Secret Doctrine", "The Key to Theosophy", "The Voice of the Silence", "The Mahatma Letters" and other books some of which are also signed by the authors Annie Besant, C. W. Leadbeater, Mabel Collins, and Geoffrey Hodson. There is also a jointly authored book signed by both A. B. and C. W. L. that has a direct historical link to the Perth Branch, so take time to read the story, on display, about this connection.

Mount Helena: Your chance to get involved and re-establish our Retreat Centre

Mount Helena Retreat Centre is about to see a new lease of life, with a free, fully-catered weekend of activities centred around the theme of 'Well-being' – to which all members are invited! The event will take place on 17-18 May.

But first, we need to clean up the Mount Helena facilities, which are looking a bit tired and need sprucing up.

The Mount Helena Working Group is planning a clean-up weekend on Saturday and Sunday, 3 and 4 May, and your help would be really appreciated.

We're getting in a professional cleaner to finish off the job, but every clean-up job we do saves us money. Importantly, the working bee at Mount Helena creates an opportunity to get to know fellow members.

The jobs will include cleaning of all kinds, including washing and wiping all the crockery and kitchen utensils and basic furnishings, most of which haven't seen a duster for a long time.

While none of us are getting any younger, there are less strenuous jobs that anyone can do – so everybody can participate! We'll be looking to organise transport in the form of car-pooling, so there should be no problems about getting there and back too.

To join us in the 're-invigoration of Mount Helena', please call Shelley Orchard on 9381 3414 or 0437 154 559 for further information and to register your interest in helping. Please note that Shelley will be away overseas until 11 April, but you can contact Anne Bower on 0408 784 443 before that date.

Mount Helena has been a great asset to the Theosophical Society in the past. Let's make it happen again!

We must go on from here

By Clara Codd

This article was originally published in the book Trust Yourself to Life, by Clara M. Codd, Theosophical Publishing House, 1968.

Not long ago I came across an exquisite little poem, "Song at Twilight." It had only three verses. I will quote the first:

We must go on from here.

Time has no turning—

Carry what we have learnt

Since there is no unlearning

The bridge behind is down.

At all moments of life the first line is forever true. We must go on from just where we are. It may be that we have been idle along the way, taken many a dubious turning. We can do nothing other than start again from just where we are.

I know people who postpone starting a great enterprise such as treading the Path, saying that they will wait until they are older or wiser. But as soon as the first intimations come into our souls that there is a way home, that is the moment to begin the way. Not good enough, we say, not pure enough, not clever enough.

But we cannot begin treading the Path except just as we are. We cannot begin any great enterprise except just as we are.

There is a lovely stanza from ancient India:

Pure or impure,
whatever I may be,
by meditating on the Pure

I shall become pure.

We can only begin as we are; we must go on from where we are.

Some will think they are too old because life has almost gone for them. What a mistaken idea! In the life of the Spirit there is no age, nor space nor time as we understand them. There is a great truth in the old story of the thief on the cross who at the last moment of death entered paradise with his Lord. His last thought gave a new direction to his soul as it left the body.

The last year of a person's life—even the last few months—can give a new direction, begin a new road that continues beyond the confines of death and leads into the next incarnation. The thoughts of all older people should turn heavenwards. Unfortunately, their thoughts often turn backwards, retracing the events of the past life that has passed so quickly. Memories dwell so potently with the old. That is well and good if they are memories embodying love, pity, joy, friendship, or beauty. But we need to look forward, too. The glories of heaven are coming. At the moment of death the Soul descends to view the past life and understand it. We must take a golden Ariadne's thread with us through the gateway of death, the thread of a golden hope, resolution, even if it is only just a beginning.

And so, too, with all the problems of life. Inadequately as we may feel ourselves to be equipped, time will not wait for us to find wisdom, help, or decision.

Whatever we are, wherever we stand, we must, go on from here. Then we may go on bravely, accepting results which will cure our lack of wisdom and capacity, holding always a tremendous faith and trust, a trust in the life which is God in action, a faith in loveliness which is ultimately and forever the conqueror. The golden thread—our own Sutratma—again and again will lead us back to our divine Self, and one day that golden thread will lead us out of the darkness of this cave into the shining eternal light.

Revelation, Inspiration, Observation

By Annie Besant

The following article is an excerpt from a lecture titled Revelation, Inspiration, Observation which Annie Besant delivered at the British Convention of the Theosophical Society, July 4th, 1909.

Attitude towards Inspiration

What should be the attitude of the theosophical student towards the inspired man or the inspired book?

He should be receptive, stilling all his normal vibrations so far as is possible, and opening his whole nature to the impact and influx of the waves of vibration that pour forth upon him. But his attitude should be more than receptive: he should gently endeavour to attune himself and to cooperate with the inflowing waves. He should try to strengthen the sympathetic vibrations, so that the accompanying changes in consciousness may be as complete as possible.

For this he must pour out to the inspiring Object his love, his trust, his complete confidence and self-surrender, for thus only can he attune his bodies into sympathy with those of the Inspirer. He must, for the time, empty himself of his own ideas, his own feelings, his own activities, surrendering himself to reproduce, not to initiate. As the unruffled lake can mirror the moon and the stars, but as that same lake rippled by a passing breeze can yield only broken reflections, so may the lower being, steadying his mind, calming his desires, and imposing stillness on his activities, reproduce within himself the image of the higher, so may the disciples mirror the Master's mind. And so, also, if his own thoughts spring up, his own desires arise, will he have but broken reflections, dancing lights, that tell him nought.

If you are going to read one of the inspired books of the world – The Imitation of Christ; The Golden Verses of Pythagoras; The Light on the Path; The Voice of the Silence – it is well to preface the reading with a prayer, if that be your habitual way of raising your consciousness to its highest mood, or with the repetition of a mantra, or the soft chanting of some familiar and beloved rhythm, in order to bring yourself into a sympathetic condition. Then read a phrase, re-read, brood over it, savour it mentally, suck out its essence, its life.

Thus shall your subtle body become, to some extent at least, attuned to that of the inspired writer, and repeating his vibrations, shall set up in your consciousness the corresponding changes. Priceless is the value of inspired books: they are steps of a ladder set up between earth and heaven, a veritable Jacob's ladder, on which descend and ascend the angels of God.

Priceless is the value of inspired books: they are steps of a ladder set up between earth and heaven, a veritable Jacob's ladder, on which descend and ascend the angels of God.

Scientific attitude

What should be the attitude of the theosophical student to books of observations? To all such books you must take up the attitude of the scientific student, not of the believer. You must bring to bear upon them a bright intelligence, a keen mind, an eager intellect, a thoughtful and critical reason. You must not accept as final, observations made by other students, even though those students are using faculties which you yourselves have not as yet developed. You should accept them only for what they are – observations liable to modification, to correction, to reviewal.

You should hold them with a light grasp, as hypotheses temporarily accepted until confirmed or negated by further observations, including your own. If they illuminate obscurities, if they conduce to sound morality, take them and use them; but never let them become fetters to your mind, jailers of your thought.

Study these books, but do not swallow them; understand them, but hold your judgment in suspense: these books are useful servants but dangerous masters; they are to be studied, not worshipped. Make your own opinions, do not borrow those of others; do not be in such a hurry to know that you accept other people's knowledge, for ready-made opinions, like ready-made clothes, are neither well-fitting nor becoming.

There is a dangerous tendency in the Theosophical Society to make books of observations authoritative instead of using them as materials for study. We must not add to the number of blind believers who already exist, but to the number of sane and sober students, who patiently form their own opinions and educate their own faculties. Use your own judgment on every observation submitted to you; examine it as thoroughly as possible; criticise it as fully as you can. It is a poor service you do us when you turn students into popes, and, parrot-like, repeat as authoritative statements that you do not know to be true.

Moreover, blind belief is the road to equally blind scepticism: you place a student on a pedestal and loudly proclaim him to be a prophet, despite his protests; and then, when you find he has made some mistake, as he warned you was likely, you turn round, pull him down, and trample on him. You belabour him when you should belabour your own blindness, your own stupidity, your own anxiety to believe.

Is it not time that we should cease to be children, and begin to be men and women, realizing the greatness of our opportunities and the smallness of our achievements? Is it not time to offer to Truth the homage of study instead of that of blind credulity? Let us ever be ready to correct a mistaken impression or an imperfect observation, to walk with open eyes and mind alert, remembering that the best service to Truth is examination.

Truth is a sun, shining by its own light; once seen, it cannot be rejected. "Let Truth and falsehood grapple; who ever knew Truth put to the worse in a fair encounter?"

Make your own opinions, do not borrow those of others; do not be in such a hurry to know that you accept other people's knowledge, for ready-made opinions, like ready-made clothes, are neither well-fitting nor becoming.
